ABOUT

The Eastern Washington Riparian Planting Symposium is gearing up for its annual iteration and we need your support!

Since 2017, Populus: The Columbia Basin Riparian Planting Partnership has been annually hosting the Eastern Washington Riparian Planting Symposium. The Symposium aims to bring together restoration professionals across eastern Washington and beyond to exchange knowledge and emerging science related to riparian planting. For the past several years we have continued to grow, averaging over 100 attendees from across the Pacific Northwest. Attendees include practitioners, agency representatives, and others passionate about riparian restoration. In 2023 we expanded even more by offering year-round classes, workshops, and field trips which we have continued to offer in 2024.

Please consider becoming a sponsor today!

This year, in consideration of the statewide freeze and budget restraints, we are offering a hybrid symposium, featuring a combination of live, virtual presentations and in person site tours and/or pub-talks across eastern Washington. While this year's symposium will look different from years past, we hope that this will allow folks constrained to regional travel to participate in symposium events and learn from one another. Your sponsorship will help support the committee in coordinating and moderating these events.

The symposium is a great chance to support educational training events and share your company's services with professionals in relevant fields.
